

About the Authors

Rachel Leya Davidson is the Managing Attorney for Policy and Special Projects at The Door in New York. She is on the Steering Committee of the End SIJS Backlog Coalition and leads the legislative advocacy working group. Her work focuses on the policy issues surrounding humanitarian immigration relief for children and young people, with a particular focus on SIJS.

Laila Hlass is a Professor of Practice at Tulane Law School, where she co-directs the Immigrant Rights Clinic. Her research and writing focus primarily on legal frameworks governing immigrant children and the convergence of the immigration enforcement and criminal legal regimes. Her articles have appeared or are forthcoming in a number of journals including California Law Review, Utah Law Review, and Villanova Law Review, as well as news outlets including the Boston Globe and Slate.